

United Nations International Day for the Eradication of Poverty

17th October 2013

“Wherever men and women are condemned to live in extreme poverty, human rights are violated. To come together to ensure that these rights be respected is our solemn duty.”

These words were expressed by Father Joseph Wresinski on 17th October, 1987 at Tracadéro Plaza, Paris, the place where the Universal Declaration of Human Rights was signed in 1948. Since then, on the 17th October each year, all those who reject poverty and exclusion mark this day throughout the world to express their solidarity and their commitment to ensure that everyone’s dignity and freedom are respected.

PUBLIC AWARENESS FUNDING

Since 1992, 17th October has been recognised by the United Nations as the International Day for the Eradication of Poverty.

The Department of Social Protection would like to provide funding to support anti-poverty groups to organise local, regional or national activities to promote awareness of the UN International Day for the Eradication of Poverty.

Purpose of the Funding

“The UN International Day for the Eradication of Poverty is a day to express friendship and solidarity with people who have to live with poverty and social exclusion every day of the year, in Ireland, Europe and around the world. It is an occasion to recognise the lived experience of so many children, young people and adults, and also the part they play in their daily lives to support human rights in countless gestures of resistance and solidarity. It is a chance to listen to their voices. It is a day to renew our determination to act all year long against poverty, learning how to do this in partnership with those whose lives are the hardest” (ATD 4th World, 2005).
